Letter from the President

Dear Friends:

Since 1965, community health centers have been a model of quality, affordable care. From low-income rural communities to underprivileged urban neighborhoods, community health centers provide medical services to those who lack access to basic care. However, community health centers offer more than just medical services; they provide patients with quality comprehensive care that addresses all the various facets of a patient’s life.

While doctors assess and treat the patient’s medical issues, nurses provide medication management sessions to teach patients how to follow their treatment regimens and keep medical conditions under control. Social workers connect patients to community resources and government benefits, and advocate on their patients’ behalf to ensure that they receive proper treatment and services. Health educators teach patients about preventive health strategies and encourage them to make lifestyle changes to improve their health. Care management specialists track and coordinate their care to assure service continuity.

This is why the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation continues to support community-based health care services provided by the Charles B. Wang Community Health Center. Through comprehensive care that is tailored to the community’s needs, the Health Center improves the health and overall quality of life for its patients. Furthermore, the Health Center emphasizes preventive care to treat patients before their medical needs require costly hospitalization. By creating efficiency and value, the Health Center benefits both patients and the Asian American community as a whole.

On behalf of the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation and the Asian American community, thank you for your generous contributions in 2011. Without your support, our accomplishments would not be possible.

Sincerely yours,

Raymond Fong, MD
President

Supporting the Charles B. Wang Community Health Center

Since its establishment in 1995, the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation has supported the efforts of the Charles B. Wang Community Health Center, a federally qualified health center in Lower Manhattan and Flushing, Queens that is dedicated to serving the Asian American community. The Health Center provides comprehensive care to all patients regardless of their ability to pay, making it an invaluable resource for those who are uninsured or low-income.

Moreover, the Health Center provides linguistically and culturally sensitive care that is crucial for patients who would otherwise face language barriers in accessing needed care.

With the foundation’s support, the Health Center has been able to provide an array of services in internal medicine, women’s health, pediatrics, dental care, mental health, social work, and health education.

Presenting the 2011 Annual Lecture with Dr. Joseph Lau

Established in 2009, the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation Annual Lecture Series invites prominent leaders in health and public health to deliver lectures for community providers, board members, staff, and supporters. The lectures introduce the audience to emerging ideas from leading experts in health care access, health care quality, public and community health practices, and scientific research.

In December, the foundation was honored to have Dr. Joseph Lau, distinguished professor at Tufts University School of Medicine and director of the Center for Clinical Evidence Synthesis at the Institute for Clinical Research and Health Policy, deliver a lecture entitled “From Centrifuge to Comparative Effectiveness Reviews: The Search for Evidence to Inform Health-care Practices.” During the lecture, he shared insights on evidence-based medicine and led a discussion with the audience on the use of research in clinical practice.
Dr. Lau’s Journal of Medicine article on cumulative meta-analysis of treatment for acute myocardial infarction was included in 1997 in The Lancet’s 27-article core canon of reading in Western medicine. This and a companion article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association have been cited over 1,000 times in the medical literature. In 2010, he received the National Award for Career Achievement and Contribution to Clinical and Translational Science, presented by the Society for Clinical and Translational Science. Prior to his work at Tufts, he was medical director of the South Cove Community Health Center near Boston’s Chinatown. Dr. Lau is a co-founder of the Charles B. Wang Community Health Center and a former Health Center board member and chairperson.

Awarding Scholarships to the Next Generation of Asian American Health Care Leaders

With your gifts, the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation established three scholarships, the Dickson Hee Scholarship, Dr. Thomas Tam Community Health Leaders Scholarship, and the Vicki Chang Scholarship, to support health worker career development.

The Dickson Hee Scholarship helps Charles B. Wang Community Health Center staff enroll in a course or training program to develop their skills and advance their professional careers. The Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recognizes the Health Center’s Teen Resource Center teen health advocates, and other community members who demonstrate their commitment to community service and their leadership potential. The Vicki Chang Scholarship supports the cost of attending a vocational school, college, or graduate or professional school leading to a terminal degree, license, or recognized credential in health care, and it is awarded to those who demonstrate an interest in serving the Asian American community and the compassion, empathy, and professionalism requisite for a successful career in health care.

“Once again, thank you for selecting me as a recipient of the Dickson Hee Scholarship. The scholarship provided tremendous assistance and greatly helped me pay for my expensive tuition. I have finished two years of studying to receive my associate degree as a medical assistant.” – Flora Lai, Dickson Hee Scholarship recipient

“It is my great pleasure to announce that I have completed my training class, Compu 21. The experience and knowledge that I have gained from the class was valuable. It will benefit me in my work. I have learned a lot of computer skills and also improved my vocabulary. I really enjoyed the class. Thanks for providing me the chance to participate in the Dickson Hee Scholarship program.” – Tina Lee, Dickson Hee Scholarship recipient

“The Dickson Hee Scholarship has given me the opportunity to take Mandarin classes. These classes significantly increased my understanding of Mandarin, so now I can better communicate with patients and community members. Learning to speak Mandarin has helped me in my daily life and has enabled me to do my job better. I am very grateful for this scholarship. Thank you!” – Melinda Tong, Dickson Hee Scholarship recipient

“I am glad to be a scholarship recipient. The scholarship provided me the opportunity to attend ESL classes in Borough of Manhattan Community College, which improved my reading, writing, and speaking. These classes have helped me a lot in my daily documentation in EMR [electronic medical records]. This is a very good scholarship program, and it can help lots of employees who need to improve their skills. I hope this program will continue as long as it can. Thanks again.” – Cai Yin Peng, Dickson Hee Scholarship recipient
“The Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship has given me the chance to pursue a well-rounded, strong liberal arts education at a private school. I have taken classes and participated in activities that have suited my interests and allowed me to explore other fields. Thank you for the scholarship; I hope that the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation can continue this scholarship program that will benefit many students.” – Valinda Chan, Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recipient

“I have almost completed my first year at Binghamton University after being selected as a Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recipient. With the high cost of education, books, and other attached fees, I appreciated the scholarship for helping me financially. For that, I would like to thank the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation again for helping me and providing great opportunities for the Chinatown community.” – Daphne Lee, Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recipient

“Receiving the Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship has helped relieved some of the financial pressure off my parents. I appreciate the support the Health Center has given me in my academic career. I want to pursue a career in the healthcare field and the money will go a long way in my efforts to pursue my dream.” – Fanny Mei, Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recipient

“I am currently enjoying my time as a second semester freshman at Syracuse University, and I am honored to have been a Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recipient. Thanks.” – Shao Mei Zhang, Dr. Thomas Tam Scholarship recipient

“The Vicki Chang Scholarship has helped me to lift the overwhelming financial burden off of myself as well as my parents. It has allowed me to continue my college education without having the worries of graduating with a huge amount of debt. The scholarship has not only significantly helped to pay off my costs for college, but it has also reassured me that my own community is helping me along the way to success.” – Jie Yang Cai, Vicki Chang Scholarship recipient
“The Vicki Chang Scholarship has profoundly supported me in reaching my academic and career goals during my time as a graduate student in the Master of Public Health program in Epidemiology at Emory University. With the financial support provided by the Vicki Chang Scholarship, I was able to volunteer for an unpaid research assistant position with a population-based cancer and fertility research study named Furthering Understanding of Cancer, Health and Survivorship In Adult Women (“FUCHSIA Women”) that is funded by the National Institutes of Health and located in the Department of Epidemiology at the Rollins School of Public Health in Emory University. This volunteer experience eventually led to a full-time summer and my current part-time academic year position with the FUCHSIA Women research study where I have gained invaluable experience in and exposure to the application of epidemiologic concepts to an actual public health research study from its inception with a strong multi-disciplinary team of investigators and researchers. I am extremely thankful to the generous gift of the Vicki Chang Scholarship that has allowed me to pursue my educational and career interests in public health.”
– Konny Huh, Vicki Chang Scholarship recipient

“When I got accepted to the Duke School of Medicine, I struggled with the idea of leaving the Charles B. Wang Community Health Center. I had been working at the Health Center for four years by that point, and had grown connected to my coworkers and the mission of our work. Being awarded the Vicki Chang Scholarship helped alleviate the struggle. It was significant to me not solely for its financial help, but because it was a symbol of the Health Center’s support of my decision to go to medical school. I still cherish the experiences I have had at the health center, but so far, the scholarship has been a contribution to a really great program with peers and faculty of whom I am proud to be a part. I am still incredibly thankful and humbled I was chosen.” – Jennifer Kang, Vicki Chang Scholarship recipient

“It was an honor to receive the Vicki Chang Scholarship from the Chinatown Health Clinic Foundation. The scholarship has enabled me to finance my graduate education by aiding with tuition. Through such assistance it has indirectly facilitated my current research in China, which I, along with my collaborators at the Center for Migrant Health Policy at Sun Yat-sen University and the Center for Chronic Disease Control and Prevention in Shenzhen, examine the mental health needs and landscape of female sex workers in southern China through qualitative methods.” – Hieu Pham, Vicki Chang Scholarship recipient
